

Anthology-ology

Take notes in your NB as you and your partner explore your anthology.

- What's the title? Is it simple, fun, or long and dramatic?
- Describe the cover -- who will want to read this anthology based only on the cover?

Read the table of contents.

- How does the anthology seem to progress? Alphabetically? Across time? By subject?
- Are there subcategories? If so, how do they work?

Read the first page of the introduction aloud.

- How does the first sentence serve as a hook?
- Describe the register of the writing--is it academic, personal, informal, etc?
- Who does the editor say the book is for?
- Editor: Read the editor biography at the back. What do you notice?

Anthology-ology

Take notes in your NB as you and your partner explore your anthology.

- What's the title? Is it simple, fun, or long and dramatic?
- Describe the cover -- who will want to read this anthology based only on the cover?

Read the table of contents.

- How does the anthology seem to progress? Alphabetically? Across time? By subject?
- Are there subcategories? If so, how do they work?

Read the first page of the introduction aloud.

- How does the first sentence serve as a hook?
- Describe the register of the writing--is it academic, personal, informal, etc?
- Who does the editor say the book is for?
- Editor: Read the editor biography at the back. What do you notice?

Anthology-ology

Take notes in your NB as you and your partner explore your anthology.

- What's the title? Is it simple, fun, or long and dramatic?
- Describe the cover -- who will want to read this anthology based only on the cover?

Read the table of contents.

- How does the anthology seem to progress? Alphabetically? Across time? By subject?
- Are there subcategories? If so, how do they work?

Read the first page of the introduction aloud.

- How does the first sentence serve as a hook?
- Describe the register of the writing--is it academic, personal, informal, etc?
- Who does the editor say the book is for?
- Editor: Read the editor biography at the back. What do you notice?

Anthology-ology

Take notes in your NB as you and your partner explore your anthology.

- What's the title? Is it simple, fun, or long and dramatic?
- Describe the cover -- who will want to read this anthology based only on the cover?

Read the table of contents.

- How does the anthology seem to progress? Alphabetically? Across time? By subject?
- Are there subcategories? If so, how do they work?

Read the first page of the introduction aloud.

- How does the first sentence serve as a hook?
- Describe the register of the writing--is it academic, personal, informal, etc?
- Who does the editor say the book is for?
- Editor: Read the editor biography at the back. What do you notice?